If it is possible, have the person take the phone or tablet outside into the garden, or you go outside with yours.

Talk about what you both can see and get him to show you exciting things on the screen as you walk around

There's so much language you can use to explain sounds, smells and touch. As you can't experience them yourself directly you will need to use really descriptive language to bring it to life.

You could even try an 'I spy' game and see if your partner can guess what you've spotted.
